STAN FORK RESEARCH TURNERS, JANUARY IN 1884. TRIPLE CHERT.

With the rapid increase of our navy ne provision seems have been made in reference to a naval transport fleet ch as are attached to other great navies. It is true, we ave a few supply vessels, whose duty it is to carry the mails, passengers and fresh supplies to the different squadrons. This service is well performed, everything being taken into consideration; but we need a few proper steam naval transport vessels, capable of carry-to the depots near the scenes of operations.

To charter vessels is very expensive, and besides the so, as they are quite unwilling to assume vernment. Freights bring in a very liberal return in times of war, and the owners of vessels suitable for car-rying naval stores can always find employment for them. Therefore it is the cheapest and wisest in the end that the Navy Department purchase or build a fleet of naval transports which can be kept in order and run af a much loss price than they can charter them for. It is to be kepted that while increasing our navy the Department will bear the fact in mind and act upon it.

PERSONAL.—Commander Gibson, formerly of the gunboat Simos, is now in command of the iron-clad Catskill, hot of the Nipsic, as incorrectly stated in some of our potemporaries. Commander Gibson is a very talented officer, and his being ordered to the command of an iron-clad on active service shows that the Navy Department hold him in high externs.

The Death of Admiral Sterer Whereas, the Naval Retiring Poard has neard with deep regret the demise of its inte President, Rear Admisorge W. Storer, of the United States Navy; there

We desire to call the attention of Mr. Chase to the above quotations, and to respectfully ask him If they indicate that the greenback currency is likely to "approximate to the value of coin sooner than sanguine persons permit themselves to hope?" Notwithstanding the Secretary's assurance that specie payments were about to be resumed, we find that in less than five weeks from the time he caused the people to rejoice in anticipation of a speedy restoration of the specie basis gold has advanced over ten per cent. The premium has not been so high since the 13th of March last, and it is now less than twelve per cent below the highest point attained in February last year.

excess of the supply, and the best paper is obtainable at ten per cent, though borrowers generally grumble at this figure. One cause of the prevailing stringancy, so far as it results from an increased demand for loans, is traceable to the heavy speculative movement in hog pro-ducts. The most the banks can do is to discount their cash receipts, and some of them, owing to the heavy de-cline in deposits, are not disposed to do even this.

The Chicago Tribune says:—

The money market opens close and active all round. Bankers are utterly unable to supply the wants of customers. Ever since the bankers in New York, owing to the closeness in the money there, coased to discount the produce paper of the Western bankers, money has been excessively close here, and so it must continue till the market becomes easier in the seaboard cities. The usual course of trade is for a dealer here to draw against shipments made or to be made at thirty or sixty days payable in New York. The banker here sends the paper to his correspondent in New York, where it is re-discounted at 6a 7 per cent, the banker here getting 10. By this system the New York banks usually carry a very large amount of produce, pork, provisions, &c., here and in transit. For several weeks past all this burthen has been thrown on Chicago bankers and capitalists, and hence probably the main reason why money is so intensely close. Our bankers de all they can for customers. The time, it is to be hoped, is not very distant when capital will so far have accumulated that the West will find herself independent of Wall street. Benzine was nominal at 27c. for white and awest, city refined Provisions.—Receipts 1,000 bbis. pork, 562 packages beef, 371 do. lard and 3,000 dressed hogs. The sudden rise in gold did not exert so marked an influence in the market for provisions as in that for most other commodities, and prices were without any great change. The demand for pork is based upon the scarcity of hogs at the West, and the general impression that, with moderate supplies at the North and a probable resumption of commercial intercourse with the South before this year's packing can become exhausted, and prices have advanced to such high figures that the fluctuations in gold exert little or no influence. Though the demand shows some abalement one day, the trade are confident of greater activity during the succeeding day, and consequently remain very firm. The market to-day was about steady. Beef was in moderate demand, and the sales were not heavy. Beef hams were steady, and prices showed no chinge. Bacon was in fair demand at about Saturday's prices.
